Project Name: Podcast

Semester: Summer 2023

Project Description: As part of my undergraduate Advance English Writing Skills (GEF1202) course at the University of Liberal Arts Bangladesh (ULAB), I completed a final project titled “Podcast Report: Wes Anderson” for Prova’s Podcast. The project explored Wes Anderson’s distinctive filmmaking style, with a focus on his use of color, visual composition, and storytelling techniques. Using qualitative secondary research, visual media analysis, and podcast script writing, I examined how his films influence emotions, character development, and contemporary youth culture. By analyzing works such as The Grand Budapest Hotel, Fantastic Mr. Fox, Moonrise Kingdom, and The Darjeeling Limited, the project connected film aesthetics with media, art, and social media trends while strengthening my understanding of creative storytelling and visual communication.

Project Justification: This project explores how visual design, color theory, and filmmaking techniques influence emotions, storytelling, and modern culture. I chose this topic because of my interest in visual communication and Wes Anderson’s unique filmmaking style. Originally planned as a written article, the project was later transformed into a podcast, allowing me to present my research in a more engaging format. By examining Anderson’s creative use of color and visual storytelling, the project highlights the importance of film techniques in shaping audience experiences, classroom learning, and social media trends. It also aims to encourage students and audiences to better appreciate the artistic value of filmmaking and explore creative approaches to visual storytelling.

Project Learnings and Outcomes: This project strengthened my research, writing, and digital communication skills by teaching me how to transform academic research into an engaging podcast. It improved my ability to gather reliable information, organize ideas, write effective scripts, and present complex topics in a clear and creative way. Through this work, I gained a deeper understanding of film aesthetics, visual storytelling, color theory, and the influence of media on youth culture and social media trends. The project also enhanced my critical thinking by encouraging me to connect film concepts with real-world communication and audience engagement. Overall, this experience made me a more creative, adaptable, and confident media communicator, capable of producing meaningful content across both written and audio platforms while applying strong research and storytelling techniques.

Podcast Report: Wes Anderson

On my podcast today's show I will be discussing an unknown character. This character's name is "Wes Anderson". Wes Anderson is an American "filmmaker and storyteller". He was born like any other common man. Wes Anderson was born on May 1, 1969 in Houston, Texas. Anderson attended the University of Texas at Austin, where he met Wayne Wilson and collaborated on many of his films. His films are known for their eccentricity, unique visual and narrative style, and frequent use of ensemble casts.

Wes Anderson makes a lot of movies but nobody cares when he makes them. Some of his famous films in which his color has been featured are: The Darjeeling Limited, The Grand Budapest, Fantastic Mr. Fox, The French Dispatch, Battle Rocket, Moonrise Kingdom, Asteroid City, Rushmore etc. The most famous of these is "The Darjeeling Limited". The Darjeeling Limited was released on 27 October 2007 in America.

A key element of Wes Anderson's work is the color he uses, which he creates himself. Color theory is the art of using color by looking at the color spectrum and mixing colors that look best. Color is used to evoke emotions in films. Wes Anderson uses color differently in his films with different manipulations of color. One thing that is always noticed is that he uses more dark and bright colors to bring out his emotions. Wes Anderson films always use different religious color palettes to develop hidden characters. Wes Anderson always researches colors to bring out the faces of the characters in his films and uses strange colors that make the audience more enthralled.

The visual style, quirky characters, heartwarming stories, creativity, attention to detail of Wes Anderson's films today captivate the youth and inspire a sense of nostalgia. Moreover, many universities now have fine arts, theater and acting departments that discuss the colors used in his films, and many young women discuss Wes Anderson in their academic assignments. It can be seen in many private universities that the universities are decorated with colors showing the game of strange colors used by him. His use of this color on social media has become the trend of the age for the youth. Wes Anderson's whimsical play with this color has amazed everyone of this era. Various debates about his films can also be observed among the youth nowadays. When his films first came out, no one paid attention to his films, no one even saw them. The young people of this era have played a major role in spreading the strange color of his films to everyone. They became so popular with everyone by posting various posts about his use of this color on their social media. And the most interesting thing is that now everyone is taking it positively and incorporating it into their education and giving their various assignments, projects, reports and presentations. Among the youth, this color combination is very common and is known to be a talking point.

Script:

Welcome to "Prova's Podcast" where I discuss "Some Interesting Characters". I'm Shafrin Akter Chowdhury. Now today I'll talking about an interesting character. Let's get started.

In our society, some people are born to do something amazing in life. The boy was born in "Houston Texas" on May 1, 1969. We all probably know what May 1st is!

He was an American "Filmmaker and Storyteller". His films are known for their eccentricity, unique visual and narrative style, and frequent use of ensemble casts. Many of you may have recognized who this boy really is? What is his identity?

The boy is famous director "Wes Anderson". Anderson attended the University of Texas at Austin, where he met Wayne Wilson and collaborated on many of his films.

Like other directors, he also has some famous films in which his color specialty is shown: The Darjeeling Limited, The Grand Budapest, Fantastic Mr. Fox, The French Dispatch, Battle Rocket, Moonrise Kingdom, Asteroid City, Rushmore etc. The most famous of these is "The Darjeeling Limited".

Have you ever heard of a director mixing the colors of his film himself?

Maybe you haven't heard. But a key element of Wes Anderson's work is the color he uses, which he creates himself. Color theory is the art of using color by looking at the color spectrum and mixing colors that look best. Color is used to evoke emotions in films. Wes Anderson uses color differently in his films with different manipulations of color. One thing that is always noticed is that he uses more dark and bright colors to bring out his emotions. Wes Anderson films always use different religious color palettes to develop hidden characters. Wes Anderson always researches colors to bring out the faces of the characters in his films and uses strange colors that make the audience more enthralled.

You know what!

The visual style, quirky characters, heartwarming stories, creativity, attention to detail of Wes Anderson's films today captivate the youth and inspire a sense of nostalgia. Moreover, many universities now have art, theater and acting departments that discuss the use of color in his films, and many young women discuss Wes Anderson in their academic assignments.
